

As informed earlier in the “Policy on the Classes of Fall Semester” on Wednesday, August 5, classes will basically be offered remotely. However, as of August 24, judging that the number of confirmed novel coronavirus cases has been remaining constant, we have decided to allow some classes to be conducted face-to-face with the adoption of appropriate infection control measures. Note that, for any activities on and outside campus except for the ones carried out in the “classes”, “dining hall, cafeterias and stores”, Level 2 (Alert) of the KUFS Action Standards for COVID-19 Infection Control will be maintained.

When any changes are made, we will inform you on the University’s website.

Courses to be taught in face-to-face classes can be found here.

* Rooms to be used for these classes will be announced in late September.

[Notes for holding face-to-face classes]

- Only a minimum number of courses will be conducted face-to-face to prevent the spread of novel coronavirus infections.
- You are not required to come to the campus to attend face-to-face classes. Courses taught in face-to-face classes will also be taught remotely (live streaming and/or on demand video classes).
- Depending on the status of the pandemic, face-to-face classes may be switched to remote classes.
- Only the following students are allowed to enter the campus: those taking face-to-face classes, and those with a reservation to visit library and other facilities.
- Details about body temperature measurement in entering the campus will be given separately.

[Taking remote classes on the day you take face-to-face classes]

- Students who attend face-to-face classes on campus can take remote classes to be taught on the day on campus (in the classrooms designated by the University). However, it is recommended to take remote classes at home or logging as far as possible in order to prevent the spread of the virus. Classrooms designated by the University will be announced via Kyoto Gaidai Web Campus in late September.

[Purchase of textbooks]

- As in the spring semester, please purchase textbooks online from the University’s bookstore (Maruzen).
- You can get the purchased textbooks either at the store or at home. Note that, even if you select the bookstore as the delivery location, you will need to pay by credit card or at a convenience store in advance (at the bookstore, you can only receive the purchased textbooks). You can receive textbooks at the bookstore only on the days when you are allowed to enter the campus to attend face-to-face classes.
- For information about the website regarding the online purchase of textbooks (to be posted in early September), please refer to the page “for Current Students” on the University’s website (Japanese site). Online purchase will be available from Saturday, September 12. For details, please refer to the page “How to purchase textbooks.”

For details about the subsidy for communication costs required for remote classes and changes in the class schedule, please refer to the "Policy on the Classes of Fall Semester" on August 5.
